The Poppy Appeal collects money for charity.

The money is given to old and injured soldiers.

The money is also given to war widows.

War widows are the wives of soldiers who died.

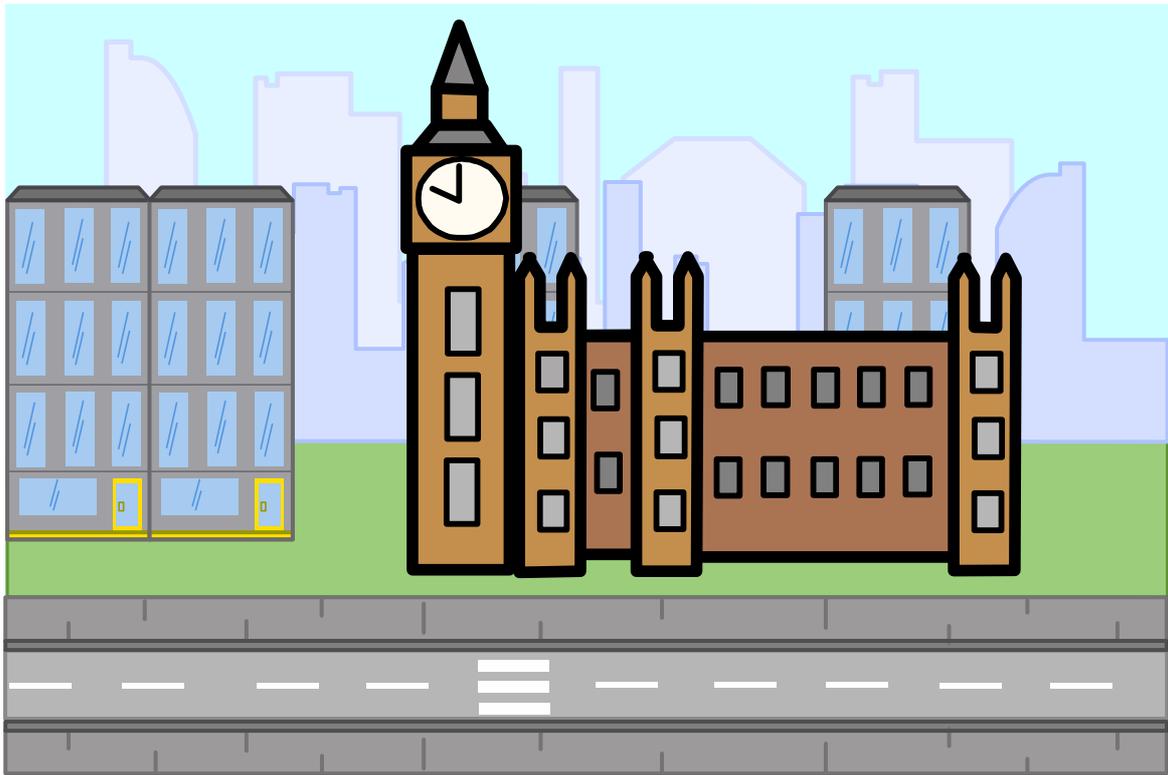

'In Flanders Fields' is a famous poem.

Moina Michael read it in 1918.

After reading it she had the idea to sell poppies.

People have worn poppies since 1921.

Injured soldiers said they would make poppies.

They started a poppy factory in London.

The factory is still there today.

It makes 38 million poppies every year!

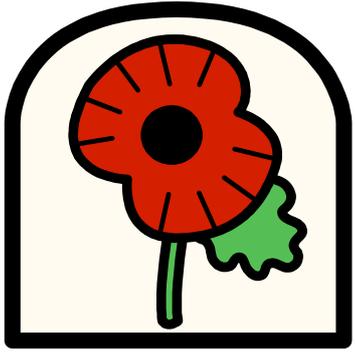

The Royal British Legion organise The Poppy Appeal.

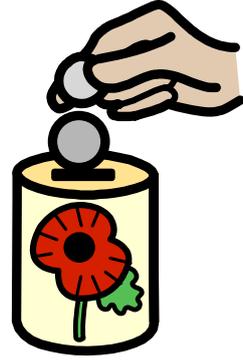

The Legion is a charity and was founded in 1921.

They have lots of volunteers who sell poppies.

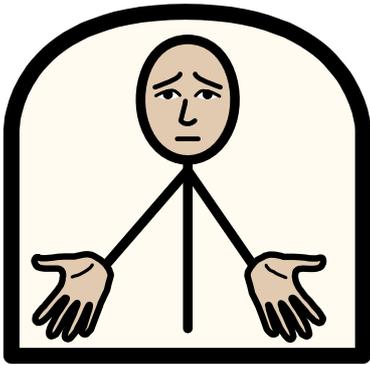

They raise 30 million pounds each year.
